

Search for:

Advanced Search

 Showing postings 51 - 58 of 58 in the thread: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's.... Jump to [Start of Discussion]
Page: Previous 1 2

Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 51
Poster:	redwolf59
Date:	8 April 2006 2:02 PM
Here is a puzzle ? for RR...R U RDLR,RNER or RYNR??Just wondering?
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 52
Poster:	Walker
Date:	20 April 2006 5:31 AM
Update - now the entire row of buildings facing Main Street been razed, including the former Boudreau's Market, I'm sorry to report. There are still some trees and brush toward the rear but there are no buildings left, and the former almost-junkyard behind Uncle Ken's has been cleared out as well. Overall, a very ambitious project. I wonder if there is anything in the pipeline to fill the block, or if this was all done in speculation of some possible future sale... p.s. the Uncle Ken's/Tastee Freeze sign is still sitting on the lot, crumbled neatly into a little ball of scrap metal :(although all other traces are removed or buried.
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 53
Poster:	mammabear
Date:	20 April 2006 7:16 AM
Boudreau's market is gone now too... mammabear
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 54
Poster:	John Boudreau
Date:	21 April 2006 9:36 AM
Coincidentally , just today I was sharing some fond memories with my wife about the days I used to help out in my Grandfather's store back in the early 60's . He had a very nice little business there . He not only let people charge , he also delivered ! Meat department was first-rate with 2 or three butchers working during the daytime . I believe that the A&P on Valley St. was the only supermarket in town at this time .
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 55
Poster:	Paul
Date:	21 April 2006 12:02 AM
Stop and Shop and First National were around then, but they were in the west end of town.
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 56
Poster:	John B
Date:	21 April 2006 6:57 PM
In 61 /62 ?
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 57
Poster:	Tina
Date:	21 April 2006 8:49 PM
What about Finast? I had the 18 wheeler toy, but don't remember where the store was. Wasn't it around Willimantic in the early 60's? Does anyone remember where it was?
Posting:	Re: They are tearing down Uncle Ken's...	Posting 58
Poster:	Francis "Whitey" Sellars
Date:	21 April 2006 9:34 PM
TINA, The first national store as I remember them, the first one was on the corner of Main St. and Walnut St. It built a new one on the corner of Main and Wilson St.I think in the late 50's.

Page: Previous 1 2